No. 607 of 2022 alongwith an application for condonation of delay in filing the Review Application.4.We have carefully gone through the contents of Review Application. On examination of Review Application, it came to light that the instant Review Application has been filed beyond the prescribed period of limitation for which no plausible and cogent ground has been offered for condoning the delay in filing the Review Application. Only general assertions have been made in delay condonation application. As such, we are not convinced to condone the delay in filing the Review Application.5.Apart from that, the Review Applicants have failed to point out any error which is apparent on the face of record. The scope of review is very limited. Since the Review Applicants have not pinpointed any error which is apparent on record and as such there is no occasion to review the original order passed by this Tribunal in the Original Application.6.The grounds for review so offered by the review-applicants for reviewing the judgment and order of this Tribunal has already been dealt with in detail in the original order passed in Original Application. As such, there is no need for reviewing the judgment and order.
